

Dear colleagues,

The Manulife Centre for Community Health Research, located within the Lyle S. Hallman Faculty of Social Work at Wilfrid Laurier University, and the eCampus Ontario Student Experience Design (SXD) Lab are recruiting participants for a

. You have been identified as someone with valuable knowledge in online learning/teaching, and we would be thrilled to have your participation.

: Across the province of Ontario, COVID-19 created a new educational landscape whereby students and instructors who previously considered themselves 'in-class' participants had to rapidly transition to a remote format. This shift continued into the Fall of 2020; many institutions are now offering either fully online education or a mix of online and in-person teaching, now qualifying most students and instructors in Ontario as 'online learners/instructors'. This current context provides a unique opportunity to explore what factors contribute to ideal online learning education and online student experiences. The purpose of this survey is to expand our understanding of student support needs and their academic experiences brought on by the recent shift to remote learning in colleges and universities across Ontario, Canada.

: All participants who complete the survey will be given the option of including their email address to be entered for a chance to win a tablet (valued at $300 CAD), with two runner-up
